CHANCE TO MAKE KENTUCKY GREATEST HOG RAISING STATE

10,000 Hogs Fattened From Slops and Distillers' Dried Grains in Daviess County Alone Last Year

(By Stephen Bolles, in Bourbon Stock Journal).

Kentucky can easily be made the greatest hog-raising State in the Union. That has been demonstrated by Daviess county farmers. Last year about 10,000 hogs were fattened in that county on distillers' slops and dried grains.

So successful were the experiments that the L. H. & St. L. railroad provided switches along their lines for the use of farmers to utilize this by-product of the distilleries for feeding Officially Tested Out.

The official tests of this feed have been very satisfactory in every way. It has the stamp of approval of the best chemists in the agricultural world. Men from experiment stations who know all about food values of different grains and foods have given it the highest recommendation.

The richest agricultural States in the Union are those which lead in hog production. Iowa, with its vast field of corn; Illinois, Missouri and Indiana in the order named, have thousands hogs. Special tank cars were also provided for the transportation of both the slops and dried grains.

Makes Prize Winners.

At a great barbecue on the Owensboro Fair Grounds last May, attended by 20,000 farmers and feeders, there were on exhibition scores of fine hogs fattened on distillers' dried grains and slops, and many cash prizes were awarded. Officials from the agricultural department of the State and Federal Government were present and made addresses on the proper care and feeding of hogs and the prevention of cholera. Specimens of distillers' dried grains and slops from various distilleries were also on exhibition and their respective food value were explained by experts.

Fattens Quickly.

One of the greatest advantages in feeding distillers' dried grain is the fact that nothing is lost. The distillers remove only the non-fattening portions of the grain, leaving an average of 40 per cent of protein, which is the element required to fatten stock. It has been supposed by many people that the best way to fatten a hog is to feed hard corn. But corn in the natural state yields about 13 per cent of protein, as much of it passes through the animal undigested. Distillers' dried grains therefore possess about three times the fattening properties of natural corn. By feeding these dried grains with alfalfa, clover or other green stuffs, hogs fatten quicker and better than by the use of corn alone and at very much less cost.

of rich farmers who made their money out of hogs. They feed the raw grain to the porker and sell him at the highest price in the biggest markets of the country. They have no such advantages as the Kentucky farmer has. At our very doors, and at a much lower cost than corn the Iowa and Indiana farmer feeds, we have the feed that will produce the best pork in the world.

The Farmer's Opportunity.

The greatest single industry in Kentucky is its distilleries. This industry pays more taxes for the maintenance of the State than all other manufacturing industries combined. Thousands of tons of slops containing nutritious, non-producing elements are dumped into the waste heap simply because Kentucky feeders have not waked up to their opportunity. A comparatively small portion of this by-product is dried and shipped to Europe to be used as dairy feed and for fattening hogs.

But why ship any of these dried grains to Denmark and Holland when we can use them here at home up to the full capacity of every distillery in the State, thereby increasing the profits of hog-raising and adding many millions of dollars annually to the wealth of the farmers of the state.

Cheaper Feed Than Corn.

Farmers should sell the corn they raise at the high price it usually brings, and buy, for less money, more and better feed in the form of distillers' dried grains. By doing this they can fatten more hogs at less cost and sell them in the market for larger profits. It is a simple business proposition that should not be overlooked by the farmer.
